

what if thickness in a sphere made out from some hypothetical one dimensional dimension would be like a volume or like an area increasing like a one dimensional thickness