

constants and not infinity exist because of weakness within physical objects in more concise words if you ask for something outside of you and you have some of these things inside you you will end up slowing down for example a photon doesnt go at a speed faster than the speed of light because it doesnt have less space within it and it doesnt go less than the speed of light because it doesnt have more space within it